Police investigate three beer parties

About 60 juveniles are being investigated for illegal consumption of alcohol, following the break up of three weekend beer parties in Lincoln. Information regarding the investigation was released Thursday by city police.

According to Sgt. Darrell Sisk, Lincoln police broke up two parties Friday night and one Saturday night, taking the names of the people involved. Sisk has been questioning the youths this week, and a number of juvenile citations have been written, he said. Sisk, who is the police department's juvenile officer, said both males and females were involved in the parties and that their ages ranged from 15 to 18. No possible adult suppliers of the alcoholic beverages have been questioned, Sisk indicated.

Formal charges have not yet been filed against any of the youths involved, pending consideration of the case by State's Attorney Robert Barry, police said.
