Jory dies

HOLLYWOOD (AP) — Victor Jory, veteran movie bad-guy whose successful stage career spanned 60 years, has died at age 79 of an apparent heart attack, his family reported.

Jory, who played Oberon in "A Midsummer Night's Dream" and Injun Joe in "The Adventures of Tom Sawyer," was found dead Friday in his Santa Monica apartment by the apartment manager, Jory's son, Jon.

Jory, who had a history of heart disease, had last been seen by friends on Monday, his son said from The Actors Theater of Louisville, Ky., where he is producing director.

His screen credits, which date back to 1932, include "Gone With the Wind," "The Kansan" and "The Miracle Worker." On TV he co-starred in 1969 with Patrick McVey in the syndicated series, "Manhunt," playing a San Diego police officer.

"Needless to say his passing leaves a void of friendship in my life because over the years we have been very dear and very close friends ever since having done 'A Midsummer Night's Dream' together," said actor Mickey Rooney in New York.

"He not only was a good actor but a good human being. I loved him very much," Rooney added.
