Board of Trade
CHICAGO (AP) — Grain futures prices were mostly higher early today on the Chicago Board of Trade, while soybean futures were mixed.
Wheat and corn futures were boosted by heavy rains that fell over the weekend in the middle of the country. Farmers said some young corn crops in parts of Ohio and Indiana would have to be replanted, while rain in Delta regions was delaying early winter wheat harvesting.
Most soybean futures contracts rose on similar weather concerns and amid continued cool Midwestern temperatures that may be delaying crop development.
Wheat for July delivery rose 1 1/2 cents to data on manufacturing activity that contradicted recent signs that inflationary pressures may be easing.

At noon on Wall Street, the Dow Jones industrial average was down 8.15 at 7,322.89, recovering from a 43-point slide after surrendering an early 23-point gain.
Broader indicators turned mostly positive after pulling back with the bond market, where interest rates rose after a manufacturing trade group reported that factory activity was surprisingly robust in May.
Stocks have been rallying since mid-April amid signs that the vigorous economic pace of the first quarter may be slowing enough to keep inflationary pressures tame without another boost in interest rates by the Federal Reserve.
The central bank moved to ease inflationary demand by raising a key lending rate in late March. Investors had been worried that the central bank might slow consumer borrowing too much, hurting company profits, but Fed officials passed on an opportunity to raise rates again last month.
Advancing issues outnumbered decliners by a 4-to-3 margin on the New York Stock Exchange, where volume came to 193.07 million shares, down from Friday's midday pace. The Standard & Poor's 500 list was up 0.84 at 849.12, and the NYSE composite index was up 0.55 at 442.33.

Soybean futures rose in deferred months on the same forecasts, but were pressured in nearby contract months on reports a large soybean processor was importing cheaper Brazilian soybeans to the United States.

Board of Trade

CHICAGO (AP) — Grain futures prices advanced early today on the Chicago Board of Trade amid forecasts for continued cool, wet weather across the middle of the country. Soybean futures were mixed.

Corn futures were boosted by the National Weather Service's forecast for continued below-normal temperatures and above-average precipitation in the Midwest over the next 10 days. Spring weather in the region averaged 8 degrees below normal for the month of May, which is beginning to crimp development of early-planted crops.

The rains also have led to flooding that could lead to replanting some crops in Indiana and Ohio, analysts said. But the more important factor is the need for warm, dry weather. Agronomists say unless the region gets several days of prolonged hot temper-

Consumer group probed for $1 million overdraft

CHICAGO — A consumer group that raises money nationwide to fund its lobbying activities is under federal investigation in connection with a $1 million bank overdraft, an associate director said.

John Cameron of Citizen Action of Illinois, which has a history of financial problems, on Tuesday confirmed the overdraft and federal probe but said no funds were misappropriated. He also said the banks would not lose any money because the organization has the funds to cover the overdraft.

Cameron said FBI agents had questioned Robert Creamer, the group's executive director, on Friday at a Cole Taylor Bank, where a Citizen Action affiliate has overdrawn its account.

Creamer was out of town today and not available for comment, Cameron said.

Officials at Cole Taylor declined comment.

Cameron said the investigation involves the transfer of money from Cole Taylor to a bank in Portland, Ore.

"Apparently Cole Taylor was not happy with it. It was a large sum of money," Cameron said.

He said he was not present when the FBI interviewed Creamer and does not know if authorities are investigating whether Citizen Action and its related groups engaged in a check-kiting scheme.

"We're waiting to hear from the feds to find out what they think the problem is," he said.

The Chicago Tribune reported that as much as $2.7 million in transactions among as many as three banks are being reviewed.

Citizen Action's lobbying activities are centered in Illinois. It generally backs Democratic causes and is known for going door-to-door seeking contributions on behalf of such issues as lower utility rates and universal health insurance.

In a typical check-kiting scheme, funds are shuffled between banks to cover overdrafts.

Also Monday, the Oregon attorney general's office said Citizen Action has solicited consumers over the telephone to buy credit-card insurance in violation of state law. The solicitation violated a state law barring telemarketers from calling residents who pay to have a black dot placed by their names in the phone book so they will not be solicited.

Lawmaker pleads guilty to DUI, gets $685 fine

SPRINGFIELD — A state lawmaker has pleaded guilty to DUI and was sentenced to one year of court supervision and fined $685, including court costs.

State Rep. Kurt Granberg, D-Carlyle, advocated a bill backed by the liquor industry to create a graduated DUI system rather than lowering the blood-alcohol level required to be considered legally drunk.

Granberg pleaded guilty Friday before Sangamon County Associate Circuit Judge John Mehlick to DUI and improper lane usage.

He also was fined $100 for the lane violation and sentenced to 60 days supervision on that charge.

The supervision will be served concurrently.

In addition to the fine and supervision, Granberg was ordered to undergo alcohol counseling and attend at least one victim-impact panel sponsored by Mothers Against Drunk Driving.

Assistant state's attorney Richard Kim, who handled the case, said the sentence was standard for a first DUI offense.

A charge of operating an uninsured vehicle was dismissed when Granberg produced proof of insurance.

Granberg was stopped after barely leaving a parking space near Third and Monroe streets in Springfield about 1:30 a.m. April 20. He said he went to his vehicle from the D.H. Brown tavern and found a window had been broken.

He decided to drive about six blocks to the lighted lot where he has an apartment in Springfield and in the process drove up on the curbing, according to Sangamon County sheriff's deputies.

The arresting deputy said he smelled alcohol and requested a field sobriety test, which Granberg failed. Granberg refused to take a breath test.

There was no testimony given at Granberg's court appearance Friday.

Knox County jury convicts Iowan of bloody shooting spree

GALESBURG — A jury that found 19-year-old Daniel Ramsey guilty in a shooting spree that killed two Hancock County girls and seriously injured three others must now decide whether he is eligible for the death penalty.

The jury in Knox County, where the case was moved because of pretrial publicity, deliberated about six hours Monday before finding Ramsey of Keokuk, Iowa, guilty of all counts, including two counts of first-degree murder, three counts of attempted murder and one count of aggravated sexual assault.

One of Ramsey's attorneys, James Dennis, had hoped for a verdict of guilty but mentally ill.

Dennis said he took comfort in the fact that the jury deliberated so long before returning a verdict.

He said he hoped they will give the same degree of thought when deliberating today whether Ramsey is eligible for the death penalty.

Before the jury got the case, Hancock County State's Attorney Karen Andrews used her 20-minute closing argument to detail the crime scene of July 8 and 9 for the jurors.

Under fire, FAA explains airline's grounding

COPELY NEWS SERVICE
Taken to task by a congressional panel for the abrupt shutdown of a commuter airline serving Springfield and other Illinois communities, the Federal Aviation Administration Thursday detailed a pattern of safety problems that led to its May 16 grounding of Great Lakes Aviation.

FAA inspectors found "hundreds of airworthiness concerns" in recent inspections of Great Lakes planes, officials said in Washington, D.C.

The problems included unqualified mechanics, unsafe propeller control cables and a cracked wing rib, the FAA officials told the House Transportation subcommittee on aviation.

In 1996, the number of "questionable or unsatisfactory" inspections of Great Lakes aircraft increased from 72 to 159 and the FAA enforcement actions against the firm increased from 6 to 26 over the last four years, the officials said.

Acting FAA Administrator Barry Valentine attributed the increased problems to the airline's rapid growth and troubled finances. The airline added 26 aircraft since 1994 and reported a financial loss in 1996 and early 1997, he said.

The four-hour hearing was a strange turnabout for the FAA, which came under fire a year ago for not grounding ValuJet before the fatal crash in the Florida Everglades.

Several House members criticized the FAA for not working in a more cordial manner with Great Lakes to prevent a shutdown. But Thomas Stuckey, FAA's director of flight standards service, said the firm showed "resistance" to the agency. In one instance, Stuckey said, the firm chose to fly an aircraft even after FAA inspectors deemed it unsafe.

However, Great Lakes President Douglas Voss defended the airline's safety record and said the FAA's action on May 16 came as "a complete surprise."

Voss said the firm was not given the opportunity to respond to many of the problems cited by the FAA before it forced the company to shut down.

Report: Light cars are losers in wrecks

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

WASHINGTON — Reducing the weight of sports utility vehicles, vans and light pickup trucks could save lives, a government report says.

That's because these vehicles weigh an average of 900 pounds more than passenger cars, and when they collide, 80 percent of the deaths are occupants in the cars, said the report by the National Highway Traffic Safety Administration.

The report, released Tuesday, comes as consumers are demanding more and even bigger sport utilities, vans and pickups, while environmental and safety groups are expressing concerns about their fuel efficiency and accident safety.

These vehicles — all in the category of light trucks — now account for more than 40 percent of the vehicles on the road, environmentalists seized on the report to argue that the fuel efficiency standard for light trucks should be raised from 20.7 miles per gallon. That would force manufacturers to build lighter or smaller trucks.

"The biggest single thing you can do for both fuel economy and safety, as the study shows, is to reduce the weight of light trucks. Light trucks are simply too heavy," said Clarence Ditlow, executive director of the Center for Auto Safety.

But Diane Steed, president of the Coalition for Vehicle Choice, said "the greatest net gain in safety would be to encourage Americans to drive larger, heavier cars."

"Why penalize millions of Americans that make the safety-smart decision to drive larger vehicles?" asked Steed.

The report, which was based on some lives."

When cars are reduced in weight by 100 pounds on average, there are an additional 302 traffic deaths each year, the report said.

More than 40 percent of those deaths were attributed to a car's collision with a light truck. The rest were due to other factors, such as a car rolling over or hitting a large truck or object.

However, if light-truck weight is reduced by 100 pounds, on balance 40 more lives are saved each year in traffic accidents, the study found. The lives saved are mostly those of car passengers, followed by people walking near the roadside or on bikes and motorbikes.

Among those riding in trucks, the report says that with the weight reduction 91 additional

Swing Set Extraction

Lincoln Fire Fighters rescued a youth entrapped in an infant swing in the Latham Park playground at 700 Pekin St.

The child, reported to be a local boy of unknown age, was found stuck in the swing at 7:34 p.m. Wednesday. He apparently squeezed his legs into the swing but was unable to remove them when he grew tired of playing.

Fire fighters applied a lubricating jelly to the boy's legs and pulled him from the swing uninjured.

Arrest

A Lincoln motorist was arrested on multiple charges after he attracted the attention of police by allegedly speeding away from a stop sign.

As Scott Harruff, 20, of 1258 1100th Ave., drove from a stop sign at Wyatt Avenue and Hamilton Street at 1:03 a.m. today, his tires made an audible squeal, police said.

Officers reportedly stopped him, found his insurance had expired, and discovered a cooler of beer behind the passenger seat.

Police also said they found

Harruff in possession of marijuana and a marijuana pipe.

Harruff faces charges of drug possession, possession of drug equipment, possession of alcohol by a minor, and operating an uninsured motor vehicle. He was taken to the Logan County jail for processing.

Arrest

Logan County deputies reportedly stopped a speeding car on Interstate 55 at mile marker 123.5 and arrested a passenger on drug charges.

Anthony Reed, 18, of Manito fell prey to the prowess of Brutus, the Logan County Sheriff Department's K-9 drug dog, following the traffic stop at 2:48 a.m. today.

Brutus tipped deputies to the presence of drugs in the car and marijuana and two marijuana pipes were found in Reed's coat pocket during a subsequent pat-down search.

Deputies arrested Reed on charges of drug possession and possession of drug equipment. He was taken to the Logan County jail for processing.

Property Damage

Vandals inflicted more than $2,000 in damage to construction equipment parked in the former Garland Gehrke Trucking lot at Jefferson Street and Lincoln Parkway overnight Wednesday, police said.

Police believe the culprits used an ice pick to slash five tires ranging in value from $240 to $1,200.

The matter is under investigation, but police have no suspects.

Theft

A Lincoln woman left her apartment unlocked and returned to find her wallet stolen, police said.

The victim said she forgot to lock her apartment on the 400 block of Pulaski Street when she left at 11:30 p.m. Tuesday.

She could not find her wallet, which contained $350, when she returned the next morning, police said.

The victim told police a man in a parked car watched her as she walked away from her apartment.

Property Damage

Vandals scratched a Lincoln

woman's car overnight Wednesday, inflicting $140 in damage, police said.

Police believe the culprits may have attempted to gain entry to the vehicle, parked outside the owner's residence on the 100 block of Hennepin St.

Theft

Thieves stole stereo speakers from a Lincoln man's car overnight Tuesday, police said.

The speakers, valued at $150, were reported stolen from the back hatch of the car while it was parked on the 300 block of Hamilton Street.

CHICAGO (AP) — Grain and soybean futures prices were mixed early today on the Chicago Board of Trade following the release of U.S. Agriculture Department data that showed the potential for large crops amid weak demand.

The USDA estimated winter wheat production at 1.6 billion bushels, 8 percent more than last year despite fears that a late freeze would slash production.

But total U.S. wheat production was expected to be down this year amid a decline in spring wheat planting. Investors also pointed to continuing dry weather in the Dakotas, which could further affect spring production. The soybean harvest was forecast at 2.8

prices were lower.

Soybean futures received support in nearby contract months from a U.S. Agriculture Department report that showed exports remain strong, with 65,800 tons being sold in the past week. That could further tax scant supplies before the next harvest begins coming in in September.

Corn futures also saw some support from weekly export sales figures, although the market remained under heavy pressure tied to excellent weather prospects for crop development in the Midwest.

Wheat futures fell as harvesting of the winter wheat crop picked up in good weather conditions.

Wheat for July delivery fell 1 1/4 cents to $3.37 a bushel; July corn fell 1/4 cent to $2.66 1/4 a bushel; July oats fell 1/2 cent to $1.61 a bushel; July soybeans rose 6 cents to $8.38 1/2 a bushel.

Live cattle and pork futures prices rose on the Chicago Mercantile Exchange, while feeder cattle future prices retreated.

August live cattle rose .17 cent to 65.27 cents a pound; August feeder cattle futures fell .15 cent to 78.05 cents a pound; July lean hogs rose .12 cent to 82.37 cents a pound; July pork bellies rose .55 cent to 82.20 cents a pound.

Wall Street at noon

NEW YORK (AP) — The Dow Jones Industrial average was up 35.28 at 7,753.99.
Advancing issues outnumbered decliners by nearly 3 to 2 on the New York Stock Exchange, where volume came to 229 million shares.
The Standard & Poor's 500 list was up 4.90 at 894.00.
The NYSE composite index was up 1.69 at 465.10.
The Nasdaq composite index was up 5.30 at 1,437.73.
The American Stock Exchange composite index was up 1.45 at 627.42.

Stocks rose at the open after the Commerce Department reported that the nation's foreign trade deficit swelled 7.8 percent in April. The gap was slimmer than economists had anticipated.

Separately, Labor Department reported that first-time claims for jobless benefits jumped by 8,000 last week to 347,000, the highest since May 8. The less-volatile four-week average also rose 6,250 to 335,500.

The 30-year Treasury bond was down 1/4 point, pushing its yield, which moves opposite the price, to 6.69 percent from 6.68 percent late Wednesday.

Bonds fell after the Philadelphia Federal Reserve said its index of Atlantic regional business activity shot up 25.2 in June from May's 1.6, indicating that the economy may be growing at an inflationary pace that could prompt the Federal Reserve to raise short-term interest rates at its next policy meeting July 1 and 2.

Philip Morris was leading the NYSE stocks higher and up with other tobacco stocks, as attorneys general neared a settlement of liability suits with the industry. Philip Morris shares were up 1 1/4 at 42 1/4 in leading

Arrest

A Lincoln motorist, angry he had been laughed at the last time he was arrested, chased and assaulted the wrong man at 2:30 a.m. Thursday, police said.

Clint Schriber, 17, of 803 N. Sangamon St. told the driver of the car in which he was riding to chase a man down Welch Drive who he believed laughed at him the last time he was arrested.

According to police, the vehicles stopped near Limit Street, with Schriber leaving his vehicle to push the victim, 22, who he had thought was the victim's younger brother. Under the impression he would be hit, the victim punched Schriber in the face.

Schriber's companion, Jeremy Collins, 17, of 717 Clinton St., then allegedly pummeled the victim's trunk with both fists, denting it, until the victim punched him as well.

According to police, Schriber and Collins also threatened to harm the victim, his family, and his property, with Schriber alluding to an April 26 incident under investigation where the victim's father's car window was broken.

Police arrested Schriber and Collins Thursday afternoon. Schriber faces charges of battery and assault, and Collins was cited for assault and criminal damage to property.

Schriber was last arrested Saturday on charges of violating an order of protection.

Arrest

Logan County deputies subdued a wanted Atlanta man with pepper mace after he allegedly resisted arrest Thursday night.

Deputies investigating an alleged party on a sandbar under the Old Route 66 railroad bridge near the Sportsmen's club at 10:14 p.m. Thursday stopped a car leaving the area.

They questioned the driver and passenger, Daniel Beck, 32. While deputies stood outside the car, Beck reportedly attempted to crawl out the passenger window, but fell.

Deputies detained Beck until city police arrived to assist, and when they attempted to handcuff him, Beck allegedly resisted and was sprayed with pepper mace.

He was arrested on a Logan County warrant for failing to appear in court on drunken driving charges, and on a Taney County, Mo., warrant for the same offense, according to a Logan County Sheriff's report.

Accident

Police cited a Lincoln woman for operating an uninsured motor vehicle following a crash on Clinton Street.

Lynn Lynch, 29, of 1836 600th St. reportedly attempted to drive around a car stopped on Clinton Street.

As Lynch drove around the stopped vehicle, it started moving and collided with her, police said.

Lynch reportedly faces charges of driving without insurance.

County unable to stop KKK gathering

CENTRALIA — A Ku Klux Klan rally apparently is going ahead as scheduled.

Clinton County State's Attorney Henry Bergmann said an ordinance requiring advance notice before large gatherings doesn't apply to the "Ku Klux Klan Kongress" set for today through Sunday.

The rally is expected to draw about 150 white supremacists to private land in eastern Clinton County.

Bergmann said the county law requiring 60 days' notice was drafted to apply to organizations looking to make money from events like concerts.

Car Fire
Lincoln city firefighters doused a blazing car in the Logan Correctional Center parking lot with assistance from the Lincoln Rural Fire Department at 1:45 p.m. Monday.

According to rural firefighters, a woman from Chicago parked her 1994 Grand Am in the lot, and as she got out of the car it exploded into flame.

"She said it was acting funny," rural firefighter Bob Thomas said.

According to witnesses, the fire started in the car's engine and quickly spread, ultimately engulfing the vehicle.

The heat of the blaze blistered the paint on a van parked alongside the burning car, the property of Easing Time Inc. bus lines.

"The flames were just rolling," Thomas said of the intensity of the fire.

According to rural firefighters, the blaze was extinguished in a matter of minutes.

The fire caused an estimated $12,000 in damage to the Grand Am and $1,500 to the van.

"It was a total loss," Thomas said of the burned-out vehicle.

Arrest

Police arrested an unlicensed motorist after following him home the day before, according to reports.

Officers said they ran a computer check on Dennis Knollenberg, 36, of 702 Sixth St. at 12:22 a.m. Wednesday as he pulled into his driveway. The check revealed the vehicle's registration had been suspended, and police went to Knollenberg's residence to question him.

According to police, no one would answer the door.

Knollenberg was arrested later that day during a follow-up investigation. He faces charges of driving with a revoked license and operating a vehicle with a suspended registration.

Property Damage

Vandals broke a Centennial Court woman's windshield and bent the car's wiper blades early Monday, police said.

The culprits reportedly descended upon the car between 12 and 3 a.m. while it was parked in the Lincoln Efficiency Apartments lot, 918 Woodlawn Road.

Arrest

Julie Goforth, 21, of Hopedale, was driving under the influence when Lincoln police pulled her over at 11:45 p.m. Monday, reports said.

Goforth was westbound on Keokuk Street when an officer pulled her over because her vehicle was swerving between lanes. After getting out of the vehicle, she took a sobriety test and failed, the police report said.

Goforth was taken into custody and given a breathalyzer test, indicating a .22 percent blood-alcohol level. She was cited on charges of improper lane usage, illegally transporting alcohol and driving under the influence. Goforth's court date is set for July 14.

Property Damage

Mary Long, 45, of 1315 N. McLean St., reported property damage to her car at 7:32 a.m. Sunday.

Long told Lincoln police someone took a sharp object and scratched the hood and driver's side of her 1994 red Chevrolet Camaro. The police report said she parked the car at 9:30 p.m. on Saturday and found the damage on Sunday.

Long said she doesn't know who would have caused the damage, the report said. The property damage is pending investigation.

Rescue run

Wall St. rebounds from steep plunge

Dow recovers from worst decline since stock market crashed in '87

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

NEW YORK — Stocks were mostly higher at midday, bolstered by some early bargain-hunting in the aftermath of Monday's steep selloff, which chopped nearly 200 points off the Dow Jones industrial average.

At noon on Wall Street, the Dow was up 45.46 at 7,649.72. The blue-chip barometer lost 192 points on Monday, its worst point drop since the 1987 crash, as stock investors used a weak bond market as an excuse to cash in on the gains of recent weeks.

Most broad-market indicators also recouped some of Monday's damage bounced despite some potentially troubling economic news.

There was only a brief negative response in the financial markets this morning after a private research group reported that consumer confidence unexpectedly rose in June, adding to May's 28-year high.

Higher consumer confidence suggests increased spending, which could aggravate inflationary pressures at the nation's busy factories.

The stock market has been rallying since mid-April amid signs that economic trends have been moderating enough to avoid another interest rate increase by the Federal Reserve, which meets next week.

Advancing issues outnumbered decliners by a nearly 3-to-2 margin on the New York Stock Exchange, where volume came to 234.40 million shares, up from Monday's early pace.

Another 2,448 players matched four of the six — good for third prizes of $71.50 apiece. The winning numbers from Wednesday night's drawing were: 2, 13, 25, 28, 33 and 43.

Many people, businesses banking on Illinois River rescue

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

It's a historic time for the mighty Illinois River, a transportation artery, playground and scenic treasure whose 327 miles slice through what one admirer called "the finest agricultural land on earth."

With shipping lanes vital to Illinois' economy and 90 percent of the state's population living near the river and its tributaries, much is at stake in the effort to clean the river and rid it of silt that threatens to choke it.

Those involved in curing the Illinois' ills have hope like never before.

"I've been here 25 years and this is the greatest amount of interest that I've ever seen," said Richard Sparks, a biologist who heads the state's River Research Laboratory.

It's a historic time for the nation as well, as a unique attempt to return a river to good health unfolds. The Illinois River project is on track to become the largest river restoration project in the country, and Illinois was the first among only a handful of states trying to use a federal program river conservationists see as especially promising.

The Illinois River watershed — the whole system of creeks, lakes and streams that feed the main river — is almost entirely within the state. That makes coordination among the myriad of players easier than on other rivers that cross state lines.

"This is an important test case for the nation," said Mike Platt, executive director of the Heartland Water Resources Council in Peoria. "If we can't figure out how to save this river, we can't do it anywhere."

From Washington to Peoria and throughout the watershed, government officials, community groups, farmers, business, environmentalists, even schoolchildren are working to help the river.

But several recent developments stand out.

In January, Lt. Gov. Bob Kustra's Illinois River Strategy Team released a long-term blueprint for restoring the watershed. A group of politicians, environmentalists, farm experts and business people spent a year developing the plan, which from state government to private citizen is voluntary in nature.

Also, the General Assembly created a first-ever permanent council to coordinate Illinois River restoration efforts. Those efforts coincide with new initiatives at the federal level.

In February, Gov. Jim Edgar asked the U.S. Department of Agriculture to commit $422 million over 15 years to the Illinois River basin. The state has promised about $92 million.

As Edgar envisions it, the federal money would be channeled through three USDA programs to help fund conservation measures on more than 1.3 million acres.

For about 1.1 million of those acres, the government would help farmers farm in more environmentally friendly ways. For the remaining 240,000 acres, farmers who agree to take land near rivers and streams out of agricultural production and plant it with grass or trees would receive government payments. That land then would be less prone to erosion, silt and farm chemical runoff, and flooding.

Parks Shackelford, who runs USDA's Farm Service Agency, said Illinois' plan may be more ambitious than the federal government can accommodate. And the state's proposal misunderstood that the programs don't give money to states, but to farmers who are willing to participate, he said.

Still, USDA is eager to work with the state and farm interests over the next few months on an agreement.

"We need to be careful we don't get out in front on something that a lot of people — like landowners — oppose," Shackelford said.

Platt says the federal money is the key to the cleanup's success. "We know what we need to do, but if there's no steady pipeline of money we can't do it," he said. "Now we're really know what we have to work with."

Another bright spot on the federal horizon is the American Heritage Rivers Initiative, proposed by President Clinton in this year's State of the Union address.

Still being planned, the program was expected to start accepting nominations this fall. Illinois officials already are gearing up to nominate the Illinois River — and are confident it will be one of the 10 Clinton is to choose by the end of the year.

The designation would be largely symbolic, as it brings no

Illinois River

The Illinois River is rapidly filling with sediment, especially in the lower Illinois, clogging the shipping channel and killing plants and animals. The river travels 327 miles from just south of Chicago to the Mississippi River at Grafton, just north of St. Louis.

new money. But such recognition would be a shot in the arm for the river's boosters, and existing federal funds and expertise would be redirected to communities along the 10 American Heritage Rivers, with emphasis on revitalizing waterfronts. Projects along the rivers also would get priority when competing for federal money.

"That river designation would be a real feather in our cap," said Rep. Ray LaHood, R-Ill., whose district spans a large chunk of the watershed.

Considered the anchor of a world-class floodplain ecosystem, the Illinois River's problems are complex, numerous and intertwined.

They began when the Chicago and Calumet rivers' flows were reversed, sending sewage and industrial pollution streaming through the Illinois. Water quality has improved in recent years, and the appearance of nationally ranked fishing tournaments is a sign of progress.

But farm acreage expanded by two-thirds since World War II and new problems exacerbated the old ones. Farming and commercial development pushed silt into creeks and on to the slow-moving river, where it collects on waterway bottoms.

That silt suffocates underwater plants, eliminating an important source of food and shelter for waterfowl and fish.

Some backwater areas are filling completely with mud, and a foot of silt has accumulated in the Illinois River in the last 10 years. Parts of the Peoria Lakes, for example, are less than two feet deep and some stretches of the Illinois River's navigation channel is passable for barges only because of dredging.

For those whose livelihood or recreation depends on the river, that means increased dredging just to keep the channel open — or switching to more expensive truck or rail shipping — as well as no recreational boating, no fishing and even more flooding.

Heightened awareness of those dangers are partly behind the new momentum to fix the river. But many also credit Kustra's involvement.

"I don't think there's every been so many different approaches to dealing with the Illinois as we have right now," Kustra said. "We haven't made all the tough decisions, but we've made some of them. ... But it's certainly not something you can turn around overnight."

Most estimate that significant improvements — if they come — won't be visible for a decade. A price tag is nearly impossible to come up with, mostly because a vast array of interests eventually will have to participate in the effort.
