Police ticketed a tractor-trailer truck driver for V. Goodman Transfer and Excavating for failure to reduce speed to avoid an accident Wednesday noon after the driver swerved to avoid a stopped vehicle and clipped a city-owned tree in the process.

Gregory L. Paul, 37, of Bloomington, told police he was westbound on Fifth Street and noticed a vehicle stopped in the road at Elm Street, but didn't see the vehicle's brake lights.

Paul braked and swerved to the right to avoid hitting the vehicle, but the front passenger side of the semi hit a tree next to the road. The truck went back across the road and stopped on the south side of Fifth Street.

Family members took Paul to Abraham Lincoln Memorial Hospital for treatment following the 11:53 a.m. accident.

Market prices take another fall

NEW YORK — Stocks fell this morning, extending a slide that began late Wednesday and halted a partial rebound from Monday's brutal selloff.

At noon on Wall Street, the Dow Jones industrial average was down 86.51 at 7,695.86 after sliding by as much as 150 points near the open.

Broader stock indicators also recovered partially from an early hit after a weak showing on European markets, which have been rattled by Russia's deepening economic crisis, adding to the negative tone created by Wednesday's late downturn on Wall Street.

The Dow rose as much as 15 points Wednesday afternoon after rallying 288 points on Tuesday.

Dow starts climbing, but quickly slips

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS
NEW YORK — Stocks opened higher, but the early gains were immediately lost in the final day of a volatile week on Wall Street.

At noon on Wall Street, the Dow was down 3.61 at 7,678.61, falling from an early rise of more than 78 points in the first minutes of trading.

Broad-market indicators were mixed at midday, also dropping from early highs.

Today's gains follow an exhausting week for the stock market. A 512-point plunge on Monday and a 138-point slide Tuesday morning pushed the Dow as low as 7,400, a drop of nearly 2,000 points from the July record of 9,337.97.

The Dow rose as much as 125 points Wednesday after rallying to a 288-point gain on Tuesday.

But a late selloff Wednesday left the blue-chip measure 45 points lower at the close and then Thursday's selloff brought it down another 100.15 points.

Including today's slight decline, the Dow still sits more than 17 percent below its July 17 record and almost 3 percent below this year's starting point.

There were more signs today of the Asian crisis weakening the U.S. economy, which could further the case for the Federal Reserve to soon lower interest rates — a move that would help prevent further economic slowdown.

The Labor Department reported that the unemployment rate held steady at 4.5 percent in August. Job losses in other industries outweighed the return to work of laborers affected by strikes at General Motors earlier this summer.

Although most of the idled workers returned to in August, the unemployment rate did not recover to the percent of April and May — best since 1970.

Economists believe that cause American manufacturers are beginning to feel economic hard times in Asia.

Financial stocks continue struggle today, faced with increasing pressures from turbulence in overseas economies. Manhattan was down 25/4615/16, Citicorp was off 3/94 3/4, and NationsBank down 3/1/16 at 54 3/16.

Today's pre-Labor Day session was expected to be vulnerable to more wild swings if workers leave early for the weekend.

crop production and supply and demand estimates.

The USDA kept its prediction of a record soybean harvest but boosted its estimated to 2.91 billion bushels from 2.825 billion bushels in August. Flat demand could force cash prices down to $4.65 a bushel, compared to $6.45 last year, the demand prediction.

Corn production, meanwhile, is forecast at 9.74 billion bushels, which would be the second-largest crop on record and is 2 percent above the August prediction. That increase came as a surprise to many investors, who had been expecting only a slight rise or even a decline, amid reports of variable yields and inhospitable weather in the Southeast.

Although exports have improved slightly, corn prices are forecast down 15 cents a bushel from last month to as low as $1.80 a bushel. That compares to $2.45 last year.

Record per-acre yields of 43.3 bushels an acre raised the overall wheat forecast to 2.56 billion bushels, up 2 percent from last year even though farmers planted less acreage this year.

Wheat for December delivery fell 6 cents to $2.57 a bushel; December corn fell 7 1/4 cents to $2.05 1/4 a bushel; December oats fell 2 3/4 cents to $1.10 1/4 a bushel; November soybeans fell 8 cents to $5.14 1/2 a bushel.

PEORIA — The Civil War cannons that once stood guard over veterans' graves in Springdale Cemetery here are gone and probably aren't coming back.

After nearly a year's absence, during which cemetery owner Larry Leach promised he would have the three artillery pieces back in time for Veterans Day, a weapons expert said the guns were sold.

A wealthy Kentucky man bought the three cannons earlier this spring, said Wayne Stark of Baden, Penn. He said two of the cannons will be on display in a Kentucky state park, and the other was traded to a Civil War reenactment group in Ohio.

"They've got a bill of sale," Stark said of the new owners.

Edwin Johansen

CHESTNUT — Edwin John Johansen, 91, of Chestnut died at 6:44 a.m. Monday, Sept. 14, 1998, at Decatur Memorial Hospital.

Mr. Johansen had worked for Marick Brothers Hatchery. He was a member of Zion Lutheran Church, Chestnut.

He was born Sept. 16, 1906, in Moccasin, a son of Herman and Emily Priest Johansen. He married Flossie Irvin on Christmas Day, 1927, in Chestnut. She died Aug. 5, 1998.

Surviving are two daughters, Wanda Lourash of Decatur and Norma Armstrong of Winnetka, Calif.; two grandchildren; two great-grandchildren; and one great-great-grandchild.

He was preceded in death by one brother and three sisters.

Funeral services will be at

"They don't want trouble. ... I agree they should be in your town."

Stark refused to identify the buyer or the park in Kentucky, saying he had promised confidentiality until the weapons are ready for display.

But critics of Leach's management of the cemetery say this is only the latest disappointment in the care of the place where their loved ones are buried.

Last fall, visitors to the cemetery reported the three cannons had disappeared from their pedestal mounts on Springdale's Veterans' Hill. Leach said he had locked them away because he believed someone had tried to steal one.

Then he later said he was having them refurbished for return before Veterans Day. Jack Bradley, who last year organized a cleanup of Veterans' Hill, wants the cannons returned. "They should be returned as stolen artifacts," he said.

Leach did not respond to a request for comment.

Whether Leach had the right to sell the cannons is questionable, said lawyer Dale Thomas, because they may belong to the federal government. An 1870 act of Congress provided the cannons to the Ladies Monument Association of Peoria.

"We want the cannons back," Thomas said. "It's our understanding the U.S. government owns them."

Chicago police probe report that cop demanded sex from teen-ager

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

CHICAGO — A veteran Chicago police officer is being investigated for allegedly demanding sex from a 16-year-old suspect in return for not filing charges against her.

The officer from the Pullman District on the city's South Side has surrendered his badge but remains on duty. His name has not been released.

Police spokesman Pat Camden told the Chicago Tribune that investigators are awaiting the investigation's findings before determining the officer's fate. He could ultimately face firing and possible criminal charges, depending on the outcome of an investigation. The Tribune, quoting unnamed sources familiar with the case, said the alleged assault occurred early Saturday when the officer discovered the girl smoking marijuana on a street. The officer found a knife near her and placed the girl in his squad car.

He then drove her to an industrial area where he allegedly demanded a sex act in return for her freedom. The victim offered money, which was refused, and then performed the act, the Tribune said.

The victim went to a nearby hospital, where she reported the incident to police officers. She later identified the officer in a lineup.

Peoria cop gets walking papers after teen dies

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

PEORIA — The Peoria Police Department has fired a veteran officer accused of failing to come to the aid of a 13-year-old when she was dying of an asthma attack.

And the June 22 death of Jami Marliere was not the only reason cited Wednesday for the firing of Officer Eric Jackson. The department also accused him of exposing himself to a woman while off duty and lying to detectives who were investigating his conduct.

"Those incidents, taken together with prior disciplinary history, establishes grounds for discharge," Peoria Police Chief John Stenson wrote in a letter informing Jackson of his firing.

Jackson, an eight-year veteran of the force, had been on paid leave since August as the department completed its investigation.

Although no criminal charges have been filed, Jackson, 37, allegedly broke six departmental rules: conduct unbecoming of an officer, unsatisfactory performance, neglect of duty, violating state law, trying to use his position to solicit sexual favors, and failing to file reports.

"He was fired? Oh, my God. I am so happy," said Beth Winston, who was with Jami Marliere when she died. "I went to Jami's grave and promised I would not give up until he was fired."

Winston says she had Jami in the back seat of her car when she tried to pull over Jackson for help, and couldn't get him to stop.

"I was flashing my lights and honking my horn for six or seven blocks. I know he heard me," Winston said last month. "There wasn't hardly anybody out, and when he finally stopped at a stoplight, his windows were down."

Jami couldn't breathe because of her asthma and died in Winston's car before reaching OSF Saint Francis Medical Center.

A coroner's jury ruled that Jami died from natural causes, a result of her chronic asthma, which, for some unknown reason, became severe while she and her two cousins were having a sleepover on June 22.

A forensic pathologist testified that there was nothing Jackson could have done to save the seventh-grader. Still, Winston blames Jackson.

"I told him, 'My best friend's daughter cannot breathe. Her lips are blue.' He never even got out of the car to see if Jami was OK."

Just after Marliere's death, Jackson served a 10-day suspension for allegedly failing to respond to radio calls for 20 minutes while on duty on Jan. 3, 1997, police said.

On Aug. 11, Jackson allegedly exposed himself while off-duty as he sought sexual favors from a woman. The advances were "unwelcome, unsolicited, undesired," police department Jay Sauer said.

Markets around the globe fall

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

NEW YORK — Stocks plunged worldwide today, sending the Dow industrials tumbling as much as 184 points, as traders followed the latest disclosures on President Clinton's relationship with Monica Lewinsky and worried about global economic turmoil.

But with no immediate fresh surprises in the early going from the newly released Clinton testimony, stocks began recovering from their lows of the day by late morning.

The Dow Jones industrial average, which rose 100 points last week, was down as much as 184.61 points this morning. It was off 113.03, or by 1.4 percent, at 7,782.63 at late morning. With some traders absent because of the Jewish New Year, trading that was running well below Friday's heavy volume.

Broader indicators also fell, but not as sharply as in the early going.

The retreat sent the Dow sliding even further below where it started the year, at 7,908.25. As it began today's session, the average of 30 blue-chip stocks already was 15.4 percent below the record 9,337.97 set July 17.

Markets are unsettled by economic crises in Asia and Russia that are threatening to spread to Latin America and are damaging corporate profits. In addition, there is political uncertainty as Congress today released the videotaped testimony of President Clinton to a grand jury as well as thousands of pages of evidence on his relationship with Ms. Lewinsky.

He said Porter's lawyers had never raised the issue of mental fitness until this month.

"The long record of this 16-year-old case does not reflect unfitness for execution. How-ever, even though this issue has been raised at this late date, we must take all possible steps to ensure the fitness of someone facing the death penalty," De-vine said.

A spokesman for the Depart-ment of Corrections said the agency had not been notified of the order by the close of busi-ness.

Porter was the first person scheduled for execution at Tamm's Correctional Center in Southern Illinois. Previously, the death penalty was carried out at Stateville Correctional Center in Crest Hill, near Joliet.

Illinois-based company buys Maxicare

First American, bought out Maxicare's Illinois system three weeks after Maxicare announced it would put its Midwest operations up for sale due to financial factors, or fold them if no buyer could be found.

First American filed its notice of acquisition Tuesday with the Illinois Department of Insurance, which must give its approval before the purchase can go forward.

The acquisition must meet a number of state requirements, said Jack Messmore, deputy director of the department's regulatory division. For instance, the purchase can't give First American a monopoly in the health maintenance market.

It's not about collecting... said Mark Ishaug, executive director of the AIDS Foundation of Chicago, a coalition of AIDS prevention and providing agencies. "This is basically what the AIDS community has been arguing we need to implement for years." At least 31 other states mention the names of people who positive for HIV be reported health officials, and Illinois set to join that group. But state decided to strike a compromise between activists' concerns and their own need to control the disease. Kelly, chief of the state health department's HIV/AIDS division, said the revised approach will allow for improved tracking of Illinois' HIV patients, who number between 10,000 and 35,000.

's day filled with ups, downs

YORK — Stocks were lower at midday, with investing remaining focused on the near-collapse of the hedge fund. On Wall Street, the S&P 500 industrial average fell 15.19 at 7,986.80. The Dow Jones industrial average fell 112 points in early trading, then rose almost 13 points by midday. On Thursday, the Dow fell 112 points after a 257-point gain Wednesday. Market indicators were mixed, except for the composite index, which was boosted by some strength in technology shares.

Investors today continued to focus on the uncertainty resulting from the near-collapse of Long-Term Capital Management LP, which manages investments for the wealthy.

Late Wednesday, the U.S. Federal Reserve Bank of New York orchestrated a $3.5 billion bailout of the hedge fund because it was concerned that the fund's failure would jeopardize the nation's financial system. The fund had more than $90 billion invested in complex bets in financial markets around the world.

'Here, We Know Your Name'

Cathie Nichols is proud of her profession.

She's an RN who's provided skillful care for more years than she cares to publicly recall. But she vividly remembers the faces and names of almost all the people she's tended during her nursing career at Abraham Lincoln Memorial Hospital. "In a smaller hospital, it's the little things we can do for a patient that makes the difference.

Here, you are not a number, you are a neighbor.

Here, we know your name."

We're proud of Cathie and the many years of healing expertise she has offered to the people of central Illinois through ALMH. She knows how to care - and chances are, she knows your name.

We're Abraham Lincoln Memorial Hospital.

Dedicated to protecting your health with excellence and compassion. A place of healing and hope, at the heart of our community.

Gas prices reverse trend

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

LOS ANGELES — Reversing a yearlong trend, gasoline prices rose more than a penny per gallon at the pump over the past two weeks.

But it's unclear whether gas prices will continue to rise, industry analyst Trilby Lundberg said Sunday.

Except for a temporary jump for a few weeks during the summer, gasoline prices had fallen about 25 cents per gallon over the past year.

Mosquito attacks are killing livestock in Louisiana

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

NEW ORLEANS — Bulls and horses are dying from mosquito attacks, sugar cane is falling down in the fields and soybeans are molding.

Summer drought has worked with the ensuing hurricane season to devastate Louisiana crops and livestock.

"This is the worst year that I have ever seen, and I've been commissioner for almost 20 years, and I've been in the department for almost 40 years," said Agriculture Commissioner Bob Odom.

Odom estimated that Louisiana farmers will lose $420 million in 1998. And the industry could lose more than $1 billion next year if federal aid does not come through to keep growers and cattlemen in business.

Lake Charles veterinarian Ted Shope said at least a dozen bulls and horses, mostly very young or very old, died last week from mosquito bites. The summer drought kept mosquito eggs from hatching. Then high tides, floods and rain triggered by Hurricane Earl, Tropical Storm Frances and Tropical Storm Hermine brought on a swarm.

"All of the mosquito eggs were waiting," Shope said. "Instead of an intermediate hatching over 90 days, they all hatched at one time."

"The mosquitos have drawn all the blood out of the animals," Shope said. "A debilitated animal or a young animal loses when a million mosquitos attack."

It's so bad, the animals keep walking at night, trying to escape the pests, and are exhausted. Some cattle drowned because they waded into a pond to avoid mosquitos, then more of the herd crowded in, and the first were pushed into deep waters, he said.

Sugar cane fields were under water for days at a time earlier this month. Floods knocked the cane into the mud, which makes it difficult to harvest.

Board of Trade
CHICAGO (AP) — Grain and soybean futures continued their retreat early today on the Chicago Board of Trade as harvest pressure and weak demand held center court.
Corn futures retreated (despite the U.S. Agriculture Department's report that reduced that amount of stocks in storage before the current harvest began. Market participants worried about reports of larger-than-expected

Wheat futures extended their losses as rain fell in winter wheat-growing regions, relieving dryness that has delayed extensive planting of the crop. Futures prices also were pressured after the USDA reported farmers harvested their largest total crop in eight years, during a period when inventories also rose to the largest in eight years amid weak global demand and domestic feed demand.

Soybeans retreated amid ideas USDA inventory data paints a negative export outlook in coming weeks. Investors also were concerned about increasing cash-market sales of what is expected to be the largest soybean crop in history.
