Paper still tops cyberspace for American tax filers.
 THE ASSOCIATED PRESS
 WASHINGTON — The number of tax returns zapped electronically to the IRS is growing by leaps and bounds, but for a majority of taxpayers paper still rules.
 Drawn by the promise of swifter refunds and reduced chances of error, the number of people doing their taxes themselves on computers and filing electronically has shot up 156 percent compared to last year.
 But the 1.7 million returns prepared on home computers through March 26 represent a tiny fraction of the total of 63.1 million returns filed so far.
 Counting returns prepared by professionals and simple returns filed over the telephone, total electronic returns have reached 24 million, up more than 16 percent from last year, the Internal Revenue Service said Wednesday.
 One major reason people are filing electronically is the quick refund turnaround time, an average of 15 days compared to a 35-day minimum for paper returns. And "e-filed" returns are easier to screen for simple math or processing errors and can then be sent back to the taxpayer for correction without major IRS hassles.
 "There are certain problems we can identify, send the return back to you and that way you can correct it up front," said Terry Lutes, director of IRS electronic program operations.
 The IRS has aggressively marketed e-filing, including a mailing to taxpayers who used computers last year that had a new personal identification number to be used in place of a paper "signature" form. But most of the estimated 126 million returns the IRS expects to get this year still will be on paper.
 "Some people are just technophobes," said Eddie Feinstein, director of electronic commerce at H&R Block. "They're afraid their data is going to be corrupted. Some people fear they're more likely to be audited. Some people just enjoy going down to the post office on April 15th."

Officials make arrest related to e-mail virus

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

TRENTON, N.J. — A man has been arrested and charged with originating the e-mail virus known as Melissa, the state attorney general's office announced today.

David L. Smith, 30, of Aberdeen was arrested Thursday night at his brother's house in nearby Eatontown, said Rita Malley, a spokeswoman for Attorney General Peter Verniero.

Smith originated the virus, which caused worldwide e-mail disruption earlier this week, from his apartment in Aberdeen, Malley said.

He is charged with interfering with public communication, which carries a sentence of five to 10 years in prison and up to a $150,000 fine, Verniero said. Smith was released on $100,000 bail.

Melissa appeared last Friday and spread rapidly around the world on Monday like a malicious chain letter, causing affected computers to fire off dozens of infected messages to friends and colleagues and swamping e-mail systems.

It disrupted the operations of thousands of companies and government agencies whose employees were temporarily unable to communicate by e-mail.

Smith was aided with the help of America Online technicians, and a computer task force composed of federal and state agents, Malley said.

Earlier this week, experts had said there were clues that the virus writer had distributed the virus using an account stolen from America Online 15 months ago.

Several antivirus software makers, including McAfee, Symantec, Trend Micro and Sophos, posted patches on their Web sites that detect and reject the Melissa virus.

It comes in the form of an e-mail, usually containing the subject line "Important Message." It appears to be from a friend or colleague.

The body of the e-mail message says, "Here is that document you asked for... don't show it to anyone else!"

Farrakhan's disciples worry about his health

WASHINGTON — Officials in Louis Farrakhan's Nation of Islam say they're seriously concerned about the health of the man who has headed their organization for two decades.

Farrakhan is recovering from surgery he underwent Wednesday related to his prostate cancer. His chief of staff said then that Farrakhan's treatment "continues to be successful and his prognosis is excellent."

But a Nation of Islam member, who spoke Thursday on condition of anonymity, said there are serious worries within the organization about Farrakhan's health.

"There is nervousness," said the member. "At this point, we are simply hoping for the best."

The source said members of the Nation of Islam recognized — including his wife, daughter and son-in-law — and an entourage flew here Tuesday from Chicago.

Members were also stunned at how Farrakhan looked at an event in February, the source said.

The Washington Post, quoting a source at Howard University Hospital where Farrakhan is being treated, said he remains in "very bad shape."

The newspaper said he was rushed to Washington, bleeding and in great pain.

Farrakhan, 65, was first treated for prostate cancer in 1991, using a hormonal therapy. Three years later, doctors began implanting bits of radioactive metal in a bid to kill cancer.

Farrakhan has 238 sex seeds. Two weeks ago, his doctor, Abdul Alim Muhammad, said Far-

Mom pleads innocent to killing her 3 kids

WHEATON — A Naperville nurse accused of drugging and suffocating her three young children pleaded innocent to first-degree murder charges even as authorities try to determine whether she is fit to stand trial. The defense attorney for Marilyn Lemak presented a psychiatrist's reports Monday to back up claims she is not fit for trial. They will be kept under court seal. Judge George J. Bakalis has ordered another psychiatrist to conduct a fitness examination because of his own doubts about Lemak's ability to understand the charges against her and assist in her own defense. Bakalis noted she has been under psychiatric care.

Six year old Lexie is a bundle of energy, anticipation and action. So when she broke her arm playing with her friends, she was more upset about leaving them than her painful injury. Maybe because her mother was confident about the exceptional, concerned care Lexie would receive at the Bone & Joint Institute at St. John's.

"I loved my Doctor. He was Great."
-Lexie

Lexie's doctor reassured both Lexie and her mother, Laura, that the injury would heal quickly. He explained the injury and course of treatment to Lexie. He even made her laugh. Of course, Lexie was a big hit with the Bone and Joint staff, with her spirit and courage. She knew she'd soon be back to gymnastics, pageants and playing she loved.

"Everyone took the time to make us feel comfortable and welcome."
-Laura

The team of specialists set Lexie's injured arm. Lexie got to pick the color of her cast. Her doctor and nurses explained her care. Lexie was home the same day, well on her way to a full recovery.

"I would recommend St. John's to every mom. You can tell they love kids."
-Laura

When Lexie broke her arm playing, the team at the Bone & Joint Institute immediately went to work taking great care of her.

Peoria offers bars extra hour DST snafu puts crimp on taverns

PEORIA — City officials are offering taverns one extra hour to serve late-night revelers because of a daylight-saving time snafu that led police to close several downtown bars early last weekend.

New owners of establishments that cater to the late crowd have to decide whether to use the valuable time on the night before Thanksgiving for many the busiest night of the year, or save it to bring in the first dawn of the year 2000.

"We took an hour away from you; we'd like to give it back," Councilman Leonard Unes, the city's acting liquor commissioner, told about 20 tavern owners and operators at a Tuesday meeting at City Hall. They are expected to decide on the day during a second meeting scheduled for Monday.

The city came up with the extra-hour idea as a way to compensate at least a dozen taverns that lost an hour of business early Sunday when police closed their doors at 4 a.m.

That's the usual closing time — except for the one day in the year when daylight-saving time begins and clocks at 2 a.m. are moved up one hour. City law permits bars with 4 a.m. licenses to delay changing their clocks until they reach 4 a.m.

"We'll take all the blame," said Police Chief John Stenson. "The (city) ordinance was enforced improperly and we'll do what's necessary to correct the problem."

The affected tavern owners estimate they lost thousands of dollars in business because of the misunderstanding. But city Debris litters the scene of a Cass County residence hit by high winds late Thursday. Storms in central Illinois left two dead.

Several area businesses, from an antique shop to an old hardware store, lost walls or roofs in the storm, and the town's parking garage was leveled.

The mayor also said the Ashland Baptist Church's 2-year-old addition was "completely ripped apart."

"Fortunately, none of the tornadoic storms made it into Logan County," said meteorologist Brad Churchill at the Lincoln National Weather Service Center.

"Unfortunately, we can't knock on every door," he said of getting storm warnings to the public. "If someone doesn't get a warning or ignores a warning, (a death) can happen."

"The northern part of the severe storm extended into southern Logan County," buffeting Mount Pulaski and Chestnut, Churchill said.

No damage in Mount Pulaski was reported or confirmed.

"We're still definitely watching the weather for tomorrow," when another rain and wind storm rolls through, Churchill said. "It doesn't look nearly as potent as the one that went through last night."

It was mapped out the fire's direction beforehand and waited for the right day, with the right wind direction and speed. "Can't willy-nilly go out and say, 'I'll do this side, you do that side.' It has to be coordinated," said Brad Woodson, who helped with Wednesday's burn.

The crew split into two teams, each with one person who carried a propane tank to light the fire. Starting on the meadow's northeast side, they worked around its edges to create a ring of flames.

After allowing the fire to burn for several minutes, other crew members used water to douse the circle's edges. Then, it burned freely towards the circle's center, leaving the meadow black with ash.

Study concludes: Go ahead, have an egg

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

CHICAGO — An egg a day really is OK, according to researchers who found that healthy people eating up to seven eggs a week didn't increase their risk for heart attacks or strokes.

"Our study doesn't mean that people should go back to the typical Western diet — a breakfast with two eggs, bacon, sausage, butter and toast. This kind of diet is very unhealthy," said Dr. Frank B. Hu, whose research used data from two long-running landmark studies.

"People are afraid of eggs — because the cholesterol is so high and their reputation is so bad," said Hu, a nutritional epidemiologist at Harvard School of Public Health. "But eggs, per se — I don't think they deserve such a bad reputation."

Diabetics, however, did face higher risks of heart attacks or strokes with increased egg consumption, according to the study, which is being published in Wednesday's Journal of the American Medical Association.

A large egg contains about 215 milligrams of cholesterol — far more than most other foods with the same number of calories.

A spokeswoman for the American Heart Association, which was not involved in the study, said the findings won't change her group's belief that Americans should limit their dietary cholesterol.

"These new data do not conflict with the American Heart Association's recommendations that healthy individuals consume no more than 300 milligrams of dietary cholesterol per day," said the spokeswoman, Dr. Alice H. Lichtenstein of the U.S. Department of Agriculture's nutrition center at Tufts University in Boston.

She agreed with the study's authors and what many experts have said for a long time — that it is more important to limit consumption of saturated fats and trans fats; the processed fats that make doughnuts, commercial cakes and french fries so delicious.

Hu, whose study was funded by the National Institutes of Health, noted that past research has shown dietary cholesterol to be less of a culprit than initially believed in raising levels of cholesterol in the blood. He said his is the first to show whether egg consumption had an effect on the rate of heart attacks and strokes.

His findings come from 80,082 women in the Nurses' Health Study, based at Brigham Young University Hospital. From 1980 to 1996, 939 women developed heart disease and 563 had strokes.

Chester-E. Lincoln may sew up deal with new superintendent

By PAUL AYARS
THE COURIER

Chester-East Lincoln School could employ a new superintendent tonight.

"That's a distinct possibility," C-EL board President Ken Ebelherst said this morning.

At a special meeting starting at 6 p.m. today in the school's learning center, the board will review contract terms for a possible candidate to succeed Jude Ney.

Ney quit C-EL Dec. 31 to take the Midwest Central unit district superintendent in Mantoo.

Interim Superintendent Louie Boward was to prepare contract terms for the candidate today for the board's review tonight.

Ebelherst said the school board interviewed four finalists, all men, after two other finalists, both women, took other superintendent positions before finalist interviews started at C-EL.

Ebelherst said the selected candidate is an Illinois school superintendent, but not from this area.

Panel recommends moratorium on gambling

WASHINGTON — A sharply divided panel studying gambling in America today recommended a nationwide moratorium on the spread of casinos, lotteries and slot machines.

The commission's report will contain a call for "a pause" in the spread of legalized gambling and encourage state and local governments to form their own gambling study commissions.

"Some policy-makers at all levels may want to impose an explicit moratorium on gambling expansion while awaiting further research and assessment," the National Gambling Impact Study Commission concluded.

The nine-member panel split over the language, particularly the use of the word "moratorium." Five commissioners approved the wording, while four voted no. At least one pro-gambling commission member, MGM Grand Inc. chairman J. Terrence Lanni, said he now plans to write a minority report.

Commissioner Robert Loescher, an American Indian businessman in Alaska, opposed the call for a moratorium and said the 5-4 division is "unhealthy."

"I have a problem with the notion that we're going to stop the world or pause or create a moratorium for the business of research," Loescher said. "That is not a compelling and persuasive reason I believe we should advance to the American public for this kind of recommendation."

The advisory commission cannot impose a moratorium. The report calls for what amounts to a national deep breath — a commitment to consider gambling's proliferation before more casinos are built and lottery games introduced.

The nine-member commission is nearing the end of a two-year study. It plans to submit a report to Congress June 18.

Unlicensed trader accused of bilking scores of investors

CHICAGO — An unregistered commodities trader is facing fraud and money-laundering charges for allegedly swindling hundreds of investors out of tens of millions of dollars.

A federal grand jury indicted Edward Collins, 44, of Hoffman Estates on Wednesday.

According to the 23-count indictment, Collins operated a massive Ponzi scheme from 1986 to 1994 with his late brother, Thomas Collins, through their company Lake States Commodities of Rolling Meadows.

The firm allegedly solicited at least $92 million from investors from 1990 to 1994 and used about $73 million of the money to pay other investors rather than investing it in the commodities futures markets as intended, the document states.

Boy's confession doesn't match the crime; he's acquitted

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

CHICAGO — A judge has acquitted a youth of murder, ruling he could not reconcile inconsistencies in the teen-ager's confession to the stabbing murder of a woman who, a coroner says, suffered no stab wounds.

Cook County Judge Thomas Sumner said no physical evidence tied the suspect, Eddie Huggins, to the murder of Loraine Gates.

Huggins, who at 15 was charged as an adult, has been in custody for more than a year for the Jan. 14, 1998 murder of Gates, 26, in a vacant North Side apartment.

An autopsy determined the cause of death was blunt force trauma and strangulation.

Huggins, 16, now says he didn't do it and claims he signed a confession only after threats and hours of questioning by police officers.

Sumner suggested law enforcement authorities lost sight of their duty.

"Sometimes in this system — in this process we have which is presumed to ferret out the truth — the truth gets obscured in the process of winning and losing," the judge said in announcing his verdict shortly after closing arguments were completed.

Huggins' attorneys, Andre Grant and former Illinois Appellate Court Judge R. Eugene Pincham, called their client's arrest and incarceration a travesty of justice and called for a special prosecutor to investigate police misconduct.
