Court hears argument of Illinois drug search

INE ASSCIAMED PRESS

WASHINGTON — The police had the right instincts about Charles McArthur, as even he admits. There were drugs stashed under his couch, and given the opportunity he would have flushed them down the toilet or otherwise made sure the cops couldn't find them.

McArthur, addictions the state of the copse couldn't find them.

MeArthur didn't get the chance, because police wouldn't let him go into his own house alone for the two hours it took to get a search warrant. Predictably, he was arrested as soon as Illinois police got the warrant and found the stash.

More than three years later, McArthur's lawyer told the Supreme Court on Wednesday that police were out of bounds and that McArthur's temporary eviction was unconstitutional.

The case made for colorful court-om discussion, with several jus-ces seeming to side with the hunt for drugs.

The court has already heard arguments this year in a case testing how far police may go in detaining presumably innocent motorists while they look for a few drug scofflaws. The justices will hear another case later in the term involving a man busted for growing marijuana after police outside the man's home monitored heat generated by special lamps and equipment inside his garage.

The McArthur case pits an indi-vidual's right to come and go from his home against police power to preserve evidence of a crime.

Wall Street at noon

NEW YORK (AP) — investors made few big moves in the stock market Friday, leaving prices mixed amid uncertainty about earnings and the presidential election. At midday on Wall Street, the Dow Jones industrial average fell 78.49 to 10,802.02.

Police also cited Barrigear for driving on a suspen ed or revoked driver's license, operating an uninsur-car, driving without a taillight and driving with expired registration sticker.

Barrigear is being held in lieu of bond while Skelton posted a $100 cash-bond and was released.

Americans ca

But some cynics are staying

BY TED ANTHONY

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

THE ASSOCIATED PRIESS
In Oregon, they mailed 'em in In two tiny New Hampshire hamilets, just about every registered voter in town showed up shortly after midnight to cast ballots. And across the land, finally. Americans heralded the end of the tightest presidential race of their age today by making inta most crucial of Election Day choices: vote or stay home.

After months of realways and one.

After months of palaver and pos-turing, Americans of all persuasions and politics — idealistic and cyni-cal, enthusiastic and cantankerous— got their chance to wield the pen-cil or yank the lever. The verdict, as nas become customary, was mixed.

Some, like Michael Duke, 22, of Wheeling, W.Va., craved the opportunity, "I absolutely can't wait," he said. Others, like Joe Provoyeur of Cranston, R.I., said no thanks.
"Pointless," he groused.

Go or don't go, scoff at it or embrace it, but it's hard to simply ignore: the granddaddy of all American Election Days — the quadrennial, almost tribal showcase of American democracy that ends with a freshly minted leader running the republic.

"This is what keeps us a country," Leonna Kennedy Wichita, Kan, said.

America has always been filled with people who stoutly straddle the border of idealism and cynicism, and Election Day brings this out in stark relief.

Look this way: You'll find a war veteran or young activist rhapsodiz-ing about democracy's responsibili-ty. Whirl around: There's an equal-ly adamant l-can't-take-it-anymore grouch, saying voting's only a smidgen smarter than scouring the night sky for extraterrestrials.

night sky for extraterrestrials.

Dozens of interviews with would-be voters and their won't-bevoting counterparts in recent days bear this out. They reflect the delightfully logical ambivalence of Elijah Conley, 54, a factory worker in Milwaukee. "I still vote in every election because I think one evil is better than another," he said.

For most Americans, this election is hardly a frantic, do-or-die event. Democrat Al Gore and Republican George W. Bush, while hardly identical, aren't polar political opposites either. And the relative cumfort and ensure that the arms. tive comfort and peace that the past decade has handed many Americans hasn't framed this election as a do- cast ball or-die event or-die event.

"I don't feel the urgency I have felt in some previous races," says Win Moses, a state legislator from Fort Wayne, Ind. "We have a fine choice between two basically good people who have different directions they want to lead America in prosperous times."

Some got an early start. Earliest were absentee voters who submitted ballots weeks in advance — folks like retiree Richard Steider, who volunteers at a Sacramento, Calif., railroad museum.

"You don't belong in America if you don't care enough to vote," said Steider, 77. "If you are a citizen of this country, you need to take part in working to keep it working."

Then came voters in Oregon, the only state with an all-mail ballot — an effort to increase turnout that seemed to be working. Secretary of State Bill Bradbury predicted 84 percent of registered voters would

Drug stores pulling cold, diet drugs from shelves

Drug stores pulling cold, diet drugs from shelves WASHINGTON — A number of major drug store chains are pulling dozens of over-the-counter cold remedies and diet pills from their shelves after the government warned that an ingredient could cause hemorrhagic strokes, especially in young women.

The Food and Drug Administration issued an unusually strong warning Monday, telling Americans to immediately quit using drugs containing phenylpropanolamine, or PPA, which is found Dexarirm, Tavist-D and dozens of other over-the-counter medicines. The agency, which intends to ban the ingredient, asked manufacturers voluntarily to stop selling PPA-containing drugs immediately and to replace the ingredient with a safer alternative.

Rite Aid, with 3,800 drug stores in 30 states and the District of Columbia, soon will begin posting warning signs and removing products with PPA, spokeswoman Jody Cook said. "We would advise our customers to check with the pharmacist about the alternatives," she said.

CVS Pharmacy, which has 4,100 stores, and Walgreen Co., with 3,200 ores, made similar announcements. Judge upholds $145 billion smokers' award

MIAMI — A record $145 billion verdict won by Florida smokers has been upheld by a judge, who also widened the scope of the lawsuit to cover more people. Circui Judge Robert Kaye concluded the award was reasonable and did not violate a Florida law which prevents a punitive verdict from bankrupting a defendant.

"The award is in keeping with the degree of wrongful conduct without sending the defendant into bankruptey." Kaye wrote in a 68-page order issued Monday.

Kaye's decision came the same day he received a federal judge's decision rejecting federal jurisdiction and sending the case back to him.

Town gets $1 million for a power plant

THE ASSOCIATED PRIESS
SIDNEY - The check isn't in the mail yet, but one day in about three years when the village of Sidney gets a letter from a New Jersey based power company there will be a check for $1 million ingide.

PSEG Global has agreed to pay $1 million to the tiny Champaign County village as soon as a proposed 580-megawatt power plant opens there in 2003.

"It's an impact payment, for them to do as they wish," said Carl Webber, an Urbana attorney repre-senting PSEG Global.

So what happens with the money?

Might all the village's 1,027 residents someday be lined up at an airport ticket counter headed for Hawaii?

No. "Like many other small vil-ges, the water lines are very old lages, the water lines are very old and need to be replaced," said Sidney Mayor Janet Brown.

that sounds boring, Webber this kind of agreement carries with it a requirement that the com-munity spend the money in a way that is somehow related to the proj-

But village leaders decided the plant will be worth the money. Brown said the plant is expected to mean for the village an additional $700,000 a year in property taxes.

To clear the way for the plant, the village board voted unanimously Wednesday to amend Sidney's zoning ordinance to allow a power plant in an industrial zone.

Then the board approved an annexation agreement for two pro-posed sites for the plant — which cover a total of 256 acres about a half mile east of the village.

PSEG Global hopes to start con-struction of the plant within a year.

The company will seek an air quality permit within the next month or two from the Illinois Environmental Protection Agency

When completed, the plant will provide enough power to heat and cool 115,000 homes and will have business development, said the plant will use state-of-the art pollution control equipment.

The plant will emit nitrogen oxides, which cause smog. But Bob Rossi, PSEG Global's director of

Cougar hunt is delayed

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

PEORIA - Several reports of a cougar living in a historic cemetery prompted officials to search for the beast in the interest of public safety.

Now that operation is being delayed for fear that poachers eager to bag the animal could pose an even greater danger.

even greater danger.
"There's a fot of Daniel Boone types out there" who already sneak into Springdale Cemetery at night to hunt deer and other game in the wooded 225-acre graveyard, Peoria Park District naturalist Dale Goodner said Thursday.

The thought of overeager, iflegal hunters mistaking a conservation officer in heavy brush for game is one reason to postpone the search. Goodner said.

A second reason to postpone the operation is that searches by state Department of Natural Resources officers have yet to produce any sign of the cougar, such as the carcass of a deer it might have killed.

There's just no evidence, said Goodner, who also said he's post-poned plans announced last month to set up so-called scent posts in the cemetery that are designed to attract a courser.

Several Peoria residents have reported seeing a cougar close-up over the past two months. One said the cat chased down and attacked a deer just feet away from-him as he took a moonlit stroll through Springdale.

Wildlife officials say its unlikely a wild cougar is in the cemetery.

Coke, Danone trying

NEW YORK — Just two weeks after rejecting a $14.8 billion acquisition offer from PepsiCo, Quaker Oats Co., the maker of Gatorade, reportedly has been in serious discussions with Coca-Cola Co. and France's Danone SA.

France's Danone SA.

Quaker Oats' board of directors

Journal reported.

Spokesmen for both Coke and Quaker Oats on Sunday refused to comment on the reports, referring to them only as "rumor and speculation." A Danone representative in Paris did not immediately return a phone call seeking comment.

Investors pushed Quaker Oats higher on the news, sending shares up $6.69 to $97 on the New York Stock Exchange. Coke, shares fell $2.75 to $58.75, also on the NYSE.

Industry experts have said anoth-

Industry experts have said another bid is still possible by Pepsi and that other comparies, -metuding Nestle SA, could get into the apparent bidding war for Quaker Oats. Robert Morrison, head of Chicagobased Quaker had said Pepsi's offer was insufficient.

Despite struggling sales of its cold cereal brands, Quaker Oats has posted 11 straight quarters of double-digit profit gains thanks largely to Gatorade's more than 80 percent share of the sports beverage market in the United States.

What began in the 1960s as a drink for sweaty jocks now accounts for more than 40 percent of company sales.

of company sales.

At one point last week, Coke and Quaker Oats were optimistic about announcing a deal on Sunday, but such hopes were dashed once Coke executives learned that officials at Quaker were also talking with France-based Danone, the Journal reported.

The Journal said Coke was con-sidering a stock-swap that would have been valued higher than Pepsi's initial offer.

Another sticking point for Atlanta-based Coke is the potential for antitrust concerns arising from its ownership of Powerade, a weak rival to Quaker Oats' Gatorade.

Quad Cities residents mind their manners

Stewart, author of "Common Sense Etiquette," bases her list on thousands of letters and faxes, many of them from people who have taken her etiquette courses.

Following the Quad Cities area
— Davenport and Bettendorf, Iowa, and Moline and Rock Island, III. —
Milwaukee ranked third this year and Las Vegas was fourth. Chicago ranked ninth.

The Quad Cities have "instructed taxi drivers how to greet guests and make guests feel welcomed," Stewart said, adding that people who sent her letters about the area "loved to do business there."

CHICAGO - The death of wed ding reception guest after a brawl last summer was a homicide, the Cook County medical examiner's office ruled Friday.

Michael Chambers, 39, died in August after being restrained by police and off-duty sheriff's deputies after a fight between guests at a wedding reception in suburban Countryside.

Countryside.

Authorities said Chambers died of asphyxiation after he was hand-cuffed with his hands behind while lying face-down on the ground. Authorities said the combination of police kneeling on Chambers' back, along with Chambers' weight — he was 6 feet 3 inches tall and about 260 pounds — led to his choking, WLS-TV reported.

The famility's attorney is calling.

The family's attorney is calling for criminal charges in Chambers' death. Illinois state police are investigating the death.

Witnesses said Chambers, a fore-man with the Chicago Water Department, stepped into a brawl involving men attending another wedding party to protect his fiance and the mother of the bride.

Keep your For many families, the Christmas tree is the main symbol of the holidays.

Several families have gone to the artificial trees for convenience, allergies or other reasons, but many still prefer to get "the real thing" for their symbol. Here are some help-ful hints to make your purchase and then keep your tree safely through the holiday season.

Firshness is the key to having an

the holiday season.

Freshness is the key to having an enduring symbol of the holidays.

Freshness is directly related to the moisture content in the needles.

Once the tree is cut, its life functions cuit

However, it will continue to function much like a wick as it However, it will continue to function much like a wick as it absorbs moisture through the stem if planed in water. If adequate water is not available for the tree, the moisture content of the needles (moisture is lost by transpiration in your house) drops by about 35 to 50 percent. Trees that drop below the proper standard the proper standard the proper standard the property moisture will not regain their freshness.

When identifying a fresh tree, one obvious way is to cut your own

When identifying a fresh tree, one obvious way is to cut your own (or observe it being cut). Many families muke a ritual out of selecting their own tree, so they know it's fresh. If you buy from a lot, you need to putchase from a reliable dealer who can give information on how long the trees have been cut. You then need to determine fresh-
